

Invitation

School of Public Affairs
UNIVERSITY OF COLORADO DENVER

Public engagement processes on highly technical and complex projects frequently get mired in delays, demonstrations, organized resistance and litigation. In this year's National Dialogue, we hope to learn what P2 practitioners and other engagement professionals think about the P2 practices being used in these projects and how the public can be engaged more effectively in the future.

- Who should be involved and why?
- How can decision makers integrate regulatory requirements and meaningful P2?
- Which tools and techniques to use and why?

A facilitated dialogue with small- and large-group activities including card storming and dialogue. Share your perspectives, listen to others, help develop ideas and recommendations for better engagement process.

This event is free and lunch is included for those that RSVP prior to October 4.

This event is open to IAP2 members and friends. Ideas will be shared across IAP2 USA's network of over 2,000 members and friends, through its outreach to chapters, international network, as well as wrap-up discussion at the 2019 Skills Symposium in Austin, Texas. Events like this are being replicated in locations across the country, during the wrap-up how the outputs can be used to inform public engagement practices across the country will be discussed.

WE NEED YOUR VOICE!

How and why the public should be engaged in highly technical and complex projects.
